

“I believe that all students have a right to be treated fairly, to feel safe, and be cared for at school. One way that I accomplish this is thanks to the responsive classroom training I have gone to. This training helped improve my classroom management and rapport with students. I think ahead about the expectations for walking in the hall, how to gather materials, what math centers should look like and sound like and more. Doing this allows the students to know the expectations so they can meet them.”
